Jack Perkins

Kokomo High School Class of 2018 graduate Jack Perkins plans to attend the University of Louisville through the National Scholars Program to pursue a degree in business finance. Jack, the son of Carrie and Scott Perkins, also received an athletic scholarship to play baseball for the Cardinals. The talented two-sport athlete (baseball and football) plans to launch a career as a financial adviser or Major League Baseball agent after hopefully pursuing a career in professional baseball. The right-handed pitcher spent his 2017 summer playing baseball around the country after being invited to participate in several prestigious showcases where Jack was described by scouts as a “potential very high draft pick and/or an Elite level college prospect.” The National Honor Society member has taken eight Advanced Placement courses at KHS and completed internships with Coca-Cola and United Way of Howard County through his business class at the Kokomo Area Career Center. The Victory Day volunteer thanked Baseball Coach Sean Swan for “believing in me, motivating me in times of adversity, and being there for me in times of need” and his parents for “stressing the importance of education, and motivating me to excel academically.”
